> Ice agents were seated, ruined our night. They ate first even though we were waiting first. They were their first priority. Birria tacos mediocre as if i made them at home. Those were not local police, those were ice agents. Be warned, they arrest citizens too you've seen it.

> I ordered chicken quesabirria tacos Uber Eats and the Birria which is the best part taste like unseasoned bland soup. I hate that it was buy one get one free because now I have a bunch of nasty food. Disappointing to say the least. Wish I would’ve chose to starve.

> Came here last Thursday for lunch with my coworkers. We were greeted and sat pretty quickly. Got our food orders in and didn’t expect for our food to take an hour to come out. Our server kept saying our tacos would be out soon. We ended up having to get our food to go because we had to be back at work. I was so disappointed that I called and spoke to a manager about an hour later. I supposedly spoke to Carson, who then apologized and said they had a large catering order of 200 tacos. If our server would’ve informed us, we would have made arrangements elsewhere. He then said he would refund us all back,which we have NOT gotten back. I am most upset because he lied about giving us a refund. I will not support this horrible customer service.

I expected better quality for the price. Got picanha tacos, Al pastor, asada and carnitas. None of it was seasoned. It was also chewy from being over cooked and on top of that the tortillas were cold. The atmosphere is off, barely any lighting so you can’t really see your food. I would say this place is not kid friendly. From the music the low lighting and profanity written onto the cups. The hype is dead.

The service here is so bad. I've been twice now, hoping it would get better as they found their footing and got past the Christmas rush. I think they likely rushed opening to be ready for Christmas and it seems their staff spent more time decorating the restaurant (which was SO great and festive, truly) than in actual training (server couldn't pronounce food items and didn't know one that i ordered was even on the menu, not a dig at her, but it made it clear they weren't familiar with the menu and lacked training). Both visits- Servers disappear, refuse to make eye contact or acknowledge you when you are clearly desperately trying to get their attention. There are constantly so many staff members (managers, hosts, food runners, servers) running around and somehow no one to help you when your own server is just disappearing for 15 minutes at a time. The tacos are good, not great, and nothing is worth feeing like you're being ignored, letting your food get soggy and cold while you wait for missing components etc... I really wanted it to be better.

Rip off. We ordered two bowls one with single serving and the other double serving (+5$). The amount of protein looks exactly the same. Low class.

Service is fine, but the food and drinks are not worth it. Nothing seemed to be salted at all. Pork belly taco was over-crisped. The drinks were just okay. Very disappointing to spend the money on. And not that this is their direct control, but there were so many screaming children. Parents let their kids sit and crawl on the floor and scream it out. It just created a horrible atmosphere and I nearly walked out after my appetizer.

> Usually I go to the Lawrenceville location but since this one opened I wanted to come check out this location. My server (girl with red hair) had an attitude with me after I asked for a drink but realized I left my ID, offered to show my digital ID and she didn't take it. Still stayed and server took so long to come take my order and didn't acknowledge my table. Me and my bf decided to leave and left the money on the table and as we are walking out they came running out yelling at my partner saying we left our tab open. 😭 that was so embarrassing I'm never coming to this location again!

> "Rreal" tacos? They are not. After we ordered birrira tacos, our server asked if we wanted chicken or beef. Although the trendy faux-Mexican spots will try to convince you that birria refers to any meat that is served over cheese and with consome, anyone who is the least bit familiar with Mexican cuisine knows that birria is made with goat, beef, or lamb that has been slow-cooked in a chili braised broth. Nevertheless, we stuck to our order. And regretted it. The birria tacos were nothing more than wannabe barbacoa tacos. The restaurant relies on gimmicky, seasonal pop-up themes to carry its business. The Halloween concept was fun when they first premiered it a few years ago, but after back-to-back Halloween-Christmas-Valentines day editions, none of it is either novel or fun. The music (and bass) was cranked up so loud that we had to shout to have a conversation, establishing an ambiance of a club more than a restaurant. And to make matters worse, the service left much to be desired. My utensils were dirty from the start; after I asked for a new set, my server pointed to the ones on my table and suggested I use those, so I had to explain why I was requesting new ones. When it came time to pay the bill, that same server charged us the wrong amount and then came back minutes later to request more money. Please save yourself the time and money, and go anywhere else.
