> It's loud, service was begrudging, the food less than impressive, and they gave us the worst table available. The BF gave me a look so I let it go. I'm not sure why he minded as even he will ask for a better table if it pleases him. I forgot to ask him why. The saving grace? The cocktails. That's what the second star is for. Many better options in the city for great tacos. It's not in our rotation.

> I did an online order, 1 burrito bowl which was tasty and good portion and 1 guacamole and chips while i was eating the guacamole i realized there was something inside of it, could not understand what was it but clearly it was something that u will add to a normal guacamole, i put it outside on a napkin to see what it was but could not understand what was it, looks like a piece of mushroom or beed i don't know but disgusting, i could not keep eating.

> $20 for an appetizer is absolutely insane. If people stop supporting this robbery prices would not be so high.

> Really bad customer service we’re trying to call for like five times. Nobody answer reach out to the store. We had to wait when the restaurant is empty the service they drop all the soda on the table and then they were apologizing.

> I would have given more stars, but I reduced it to 1 because of the service. First of all, I hate these franchise Mexican restaurants. When I eat Mexican, I usually like authentic. Mainly because these franchises are overhyped and overpriced for a mediocre experience and mediocre food. . . I was right! First of all, it took someone forever to acknowledge me at the bar. Nobody greeted me. My food was $40+ for ramen and two tacos. It took so long for the food to come out. And even though it was way more than what I planned to spend, I still wanted to give the waitress something for taking my to go order. The smallest thing I had $10 but I wanted change. She told me she had change but gave me back a $5 bill, and asked me was that enough. No! It's not $10. And how are you so entitled that you assume that the money is for you? Like I said, Mediocre and entitled service is what I expect at these franchises. . . So I got the food, and the tacos were okay. The Birria ramen was trash. Very mediocre, SALTY and generic. Little to no meat. They added no onions, no cilantro, no jalapeno, but added corn and cheese. It was not good. This place was what I expected. Unfortunately, it was the only thing open close to me on a snow day.

> XIO’s service was terrible. It completely ruined my experience and wasted my entire Friday. We were first told there was no table available, even though we could clearly see few open. Only after we pointed it out were we given the table. On top of that, our drinks were left sitting on the bar counter while the server made no effort to bring them to us. Overall, very poor and disappointing service.

> Unfortunately not the Rreal I knew at the midtown location. Tacos were just chunks of fat. The tortillas were cold and oily. The location is cold. And they use a QR code payment system that you must avoid. Over priced with extra fees plus it seems management gets a cut and pushes seevers to use it (or so we were told). Quite sad as the original location had good tended to with love from the chef. Move along. Better tacos are available.
