> I ordered from Postmates and the fish was burned and the batter was most of the taco. There also was a lime in my taco. The presentation was nice but biting into it I didn’t taste the fish at all. Upon further inspection the fish was barely there and what was there, was over cooked.

> This place has 5 stars which is STUNNING and means my experience must the exception. We will never go here again. Y'all enjoy. First, their online reservation app works only if you have 5 people or less. When you call, an AI robocall answers. It offered to connect me to a human but all it did was send me to a voice mailbox that was FULL. No way to reach anyone to confirm reservation for 7 for a birthday. The workaround was to use their reservation app for 5 and add a note that we were really a party of 7. This place is absolutely not worth $23 to park for 2 hours on a Sunday. YES, there's other parking, FREE parking, but that was what we found nearest the place. We weren't going to drive around a congested area to find another spot. That's on us but it is still a negative. We ordered the $21 sharable giant chicken quesadilla. We asked for grilled chicken not shredded. It was not in the menu and the server never mentioned it was ALL dark meat which we don't eat. In fact, when I asked, she told us white meat wasn't even an option! SERIOUSLY?! We've eaten Mexican food for DECADES. I couldn't have been more surprised at no white meat. Just freaking GROSS. But, I know dark meat is CHEAPER so Rreal Tacos makes more by selling just dark meat chicken. We would've paid an upcharge for white meat! We gave away the quesadilla to others at our table so we wouldn't waste it. The place is incredibly noisy and crowded. It is tight in there. Maybe that's a vibe but not for our group. It was super fun sitting at our lower table with our heads at butt level for the 2 people at the pub height table adjacent to ours! (eye roll) Our server was nice but never once offered to refill our water. She didn't send anyone over to do it either. We told her most of us had never been there before but she still didn't bother to mention the QR code on the table so you can scan and self-pay your check while they automatically add service fees (for WHAT service?!) and auto-add a tip for a group our size and a "SUNDAY PLATFORM FEE." WTH is that? Such a great use of our time waiting for checks that never came. All she had to do was MENTION the QR code process. The cherry on top was the fact that they CHARGED for the birthday dessert! They didn't tell us. We didn't ORDER anything specific. They chose the dessert and charged us for it. Maybe places don't do a bday freebie anymore? Fine, just let us know beforehand. Knowing in advance we were new there, knowing in advance we were there for a birthday (confirmed with the server), only 2 employees came out for the birthday greeting, served a dessert we didn't order, and slapped it on the bill. (You won't see that on the receipt I uploaded as another member of our party paid it.) This place is the ANTI-Mexican restaurant. If you're looking for a traditional experience that won't charge you for chips and salsa or a simple birthday treat, RUN, run fast and far away from Rreal Tacos. If you want to be nickeled and dimed for every single thing by a loud, crowded restaurant too busy to care if you really like it, Rreal Tacos Decatur is waiting for you!

I've never been to a restaurant where you have to pay $20 per hour to park. The service is mediocre. also, they have two restrooms unisex restroom. The Service whole time was over an hour just to be set outside. Our server just kept disappearing. The quesadilla came out. I'm pretty cold. The case I was lukewarm I came because of TikTok, but it did not live up to the height if you want true authentic Mexican Mexican food, I suggest you go to your usual spot. This did not live up to the hype at all.

If you eat in person, make them give you a check instead of using the QR code to pay. There is an additional 99 cent 'platform fee' added on to every mobile check. Why, in any scenario, should someone pay more money for 'privilege' of doing the server's job for them? If a restaurant wants to use some half-baked online payment system, and there is some kind of per-transaction fee involved, it is an insult to make their customers do more work AND eat the cost of a less personal, more complicated, version of a process that has worked just fine for decades.

The waitress was very friendly and helpful — that was the only positive part of our experience. The tacos had decent flavor, but they were served cold. The tortillas were cold, and even the grilled shrimp weren't warm. The ramen was also served cold. When we raised the concern, the kitchen simply microwaved the bowl and returned it to the table. Being served reheated food was very disappointing. If I wanted microwaved ramen, I could easily buy it from Walmart. Wouldnt recommended

DO NOT pick up from this place! The food took forever!! We ordered from uber eats and the app said it was ready and we waited for 25 mins as everyone else got their food.

Been sitting for over an hour , food was cold. Chips were stale and then they would offer us things without even having it.

> Last night, my friend and I had a very disappointing and uncomfortable experience sitting at the bar. We had already ordered tacos and drinks, and all I was trying to do was order a simple side of guacamole and chips. Multiple times, I politely tried to get the attention of the young bartender (she looked very young, possibly around 16). Each time I tried, she dismissed me and said someone else would come assist me but no one ever did. I wasn't being loud. I wasn't being rude. I was simply trying to order food. The service alone was unacceptable. But what made the situation worse was overhearing the bartender refer to me as "la negra" while subtly pointing at me and speaking to another coworker. I was shocked. At first, I thought maybe I heard wrong and didn't want to jump to conclusions or cause a scene. However, my friend heard it too and was ready to address it. I chose not to escalate the situation in the moment because I didn't want it to turn into something bigger. No customer should be ignored or labeled in that way….. The employee was wearing an all-black uniform, had her hair in a ponytail, and was working at the bar. Another staff member who was really sweet (wish i could remember his name to give him kudos) mentioned her name was "Jus" or "Yus." As a paying customer, I expect basic respect and service. Being dismissed repeatedly and then referred to by my race was both hurtful and unacceptable. I truly hope management addresses this seriously. No one should feel uncomfortable or singled out when they're simply trying to enjoy a meal.

> 20 minute wait at 2;30 in the afternoon for tacos to go? Eh, won't be doing that again.
